I am Kwency

I am web designer by day
& and Batman's trusty sidekick by night.

Before I fell in love with programming, I used to work as a graphic designer. But when I started studying interactive media design at Fanshawe College, I discovered a whole new world.

Fast forward five years, and I'm still here doing what I love - creating sleek, user-friendly interfaces for fast-growing start-ups. I'm originally from the Philippines, but I now call London, Canada home. My ultimate goal is to reach senior level front-end knowledge and increase access to skill-sharing.

My approach to work is logic, consistency and rationality.

My mission is to design and develop websites that help my clients grow their sales. And let me tell you, nothing feels better than seeing a client's business take off because of something I created. Whether it's coding during the day or fighting crime with Batman at night, I'm always up for a challenge.

I'm passionate about skill-sharing and continuous learning, and I believe it's crucial to give back to the community. That's why I'm always looking for opportunities to share my knowledge with others.

So there you have it - a little glimpse into my life as a web designer by day, crime-fighter by night, and all-around lover of creating awesome things on
